

A Weekly FAX from the Center for Substance Abuse Research

University of Maryland, College Park

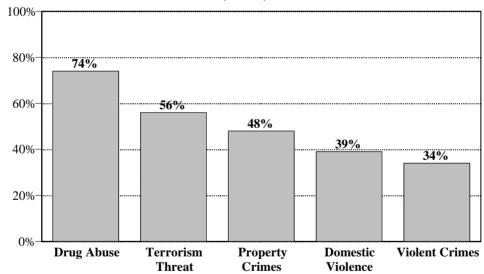

Majority of Police Chiefs Report Drug Abuse Is a Serious Problem in Their Community; Three Out of Four Report Inadequate Resources to Deal with Drug Abuse

Drug abuse is the most serious and under-resourced problem faced by law enforcement, according to a recent survey of 300 police chiefs across the United States. Sixty-three percent of police chiefs reported that drug abuse was a serious problem in their community—more than any other issue (data not shown). Furthermore, three-fourths of police chiefs reported that there are too little resources available for their police department to use in dealing with drug abuse. Chiefs in medium-size communities and small towns were most likely to express dissatisfaction with the resources they have to deal with drug abuse (data not shown).

Percentage of U.S. Police Chiefs Reporting They Have Too Little Resources to Deal With Issues, 2004

(N=300)*

^{*}A national telephone survey of 300 chiefs of police in large cities, medium communities, and small towns was conducted in June 2004 by Peter D. Hart Research Associates

SOURCE: Adapted by CESAR from Drug Strategies, Drugs and Crime Across America: Police Chiefs Speak Out, December 2004. Available online at http://www.drugstrategies.org/Police_Poll.pdf.

CESAR Wishes You a Very Happy Holiday Season!

This is the final issue of Volume 13 of the CESAR FAX. The CESAR FAX will resume with Volume 14, Issue 1, on January 3, 2005. Thank you for your support during the past year!

•• 301-405-9770 (voice) •• 301-403-8342 (fax) •• CESAR@cesar.umd.edu •• www.cesar.umd.edu •• CESAR FAX is supported by BYRN 2004-1206, awarded by the U.S. Department of Justice through the Governor's Office of Crime Control and Prevention. CESAR FAX may be copied without permission. Please cite CESAR as the source.