Friends and Family Are Most Common Source of Prescription Amphetamines and Narcotics Used Nonmedically by 12th Graders

Friends and family are the most common source of prescription amphetamines and narcotics used by high school seniors without a doctor's orders, according to data from the national Monitoring the Future Survey. More than one-half of 12th graders who used these prescription drugs nonmedically in the past year reported getting them for free and more than one-third reported buying them from a friend or relative. While "clearly the informal network of relatives and friends play a major role in the distribution of these prescription drugs to young users," high school seniors also report getting prescription drugs from other sources, such as from drug dealers or buying them on the internet. Of particular interest is that 40% of 12th graders who had used their prescription narcotics nonmedically reported obtaining the drugs from a prescription they already had (see figure below), compared to only 15% of those using prescription amphetamines nonmedically.

(2007-2008 Combined)

NOTE: Percentages sum to more than 100 because respondents could report more than one source.

Establish a Community Services Locator in Your County or State

Since 2007, CESAR has operated the interactive Maryland Community Services Locator (MDCSL) website (www.mdcsll.org), which allows users to quickly find detailed resource listings for a variety of Maryland community resources, including substance abuse treatment, housing services, and job readiness programs. If you are interested in establishing a community services locator in your county or state, CESAR can share lessons learned, provide consultant services, or manage the development of your program. Please send inquiries to mdcsll@cesar.umd.edu.
